June 2021 Bright, pale peach-pink, even colour throughout. The nose is gently full and elegant; aromas of subtle strawberries, peaches, citrus interweave white spice and floral fragrance. Medium-bodied, a textural palate with fine-phenolics, displaying aromas of strawberries, peaches, citrus and zest melded with subtle white flowers and spices. The wine is clean and refreshing with a chalky texture; acidity drives to a dry, elegant finish. This is an elegantly classic Provence Rosé as one would expect, dry and refreshing with subtle finesse. Match with cold-smoked salmon and as an aperitif over the next 2-3 years. A blend of Grenache (60%), Syrah (20%) and Cinsault (20%), fermented to 13%.

Aix is a wine made for sharing, and comes in larger formats, from the regular 75cl bottle all the way to a 15L nebuchadnezzar (that's the equivalent of 20 bottles FYI). The panel found the blend of grapes injects a freshness, comprising of white peach, nectarine and lemon, perfect for sipping as an aperitivo.

Wine Very bright appearance with classic hues of pale onion skin and rose pink. Aromas are also classic with scents of peaches and fresh red apple, roses and a distinctive powdered granite soil complexity. Refreshingly crisp and fruity on the palate with flavours of peach, lemon and apple. A very fine fruit tannin layer and reminder of granite soil flavour add depth while the rose and lifted freshness add charm. A lovely example with so many applications from aperitif to salads to oysters or just on its own. Best drinking upon purchase and through summer 2022.
